I am honored to be in community with other artists. Thank you all, every one, whether I've named you here or not. In particular, I want to thank my artist friends Joanne Hoover, Diana Stetson, David Leddick, Hershel Weiss, and Bob Shaw – without your friendship, your acceptance, your challenges, and your kind words, I could not have put my art out there. To be part of an artistic community is as important to me as air. My New Mexico art community also includes some groups still active and thriving, including the Corrales Bosque Gallery; and some that were fabulous and are alive now only in memory, including Writers Alive! and the Santa Fe Writers Group.

Without the personal compassion and encouragement of Lavinia Gilbert, Muriel Lass, Dorothy (Kramer) Gardner, Georgia Boyer, and Mio Fredland, I would not have moved to New Mexico nor found ways to think of my snapshots and my scribbling as art. Thank you for believing in me.

A special note of appreciation to Forge Toro who kept pushing me to publish this book and who designed the book itself.

Too Much on my Plate originally published in Albuquerque Woman Magazine, Duval Publishing, Inc.

The Loneliest Road in America originally written for Dorothy (Kramer) Gardner for her 90th birthday.
